Disconnected Youth & HIV

An open panel discussion about the unique needs & risks facing young women and men in New York City.

Recently, social service providers, advocates and faith leaders have become increasingly focused on supporting young adults between 16 and 24 years of age who aren't engaged in education or work. These individuals – often defined as “Disconnected Youth” – face a range of obstacles and dangers, including HIV.

Join us for a panel and group discussion:

- Who exactly are we concerned about?
- How does HIV relate to other challenges they face?
- What services are tailored to their needs, and where do gaps exist?
- How can faith groups and others advocate for this vulnerable group?

Wednesday, July 14th, Time TBD
281 Park Avenue South, at 22nd St.
